

From the Boston Business Journal

:http://www.bizjournals.com/boston/real_estate/2014/12/final-meeting-tonight-for-the-south-boston.html

Final meeting tonight for the South Boston Waterfront Sustainable Transportation Plan

Dec 18, 2014, 1:13pm EST

Catherine Carlock

Real Estate Editor- Boston Business Journal

Email | Twitter

The team behind the South Boston Waterfront Sustainable Transportation Plan will host its fifth and final community meeting tonight at the Boston Convention & Exhibition Center.

The community meeting will seek public input and commentary about the draft transportation plan. The team will take those comments under consideration before developing a final report of the South Boston Waterfront Sustainable Transportation Plan around the end of the year or in early 2015.

One of the central goals of the transportation plan is to improve access and mobility across multiple modes of transportation for residents, workers and tourists throughout the neighborhood, which in theory will maximize economic growth and vitality along the waterfront and, as the draft plan says, "enhance the public realm." The draft plan also highlights expanding community connections within South Boston and the South Boston Waterfront and enhancing mobility inside the Waterfront itself.

The plan is sponsored by the Massachusetts Convention Center Authority, Massport, the Massachusetts Department of Transportation and the city of Boston and is being managed by Boston-based transportation management nonprofit A Better City.

Tonight's community meeting will start at 6 p.m. in Room 153 of the Boston Convention & Exhibition Center at 415 Summer St.